Rain

Between
18:00 Wed 1 Nov 2023 and
23:59 Thu 2 Nov 2023

Heavy rain associated with Storm Ciarán is likely to bring disruption to southern parts of England and Wales.

What to expect

- Delays or cancellations to train and bus services are possible
- Homes and businesses could be flooded, causing damage to some buildings
- Some communities may be cut off by flooded roads
- Fast flowing or deep floodwater is possible, causing a danger to life

Further details

Periods of heavy rain, associated with Storm Ciarán, are expected to affect much of southern England and south Wales from Wednesday evening and during Thursday. A further 20 to 30 mm is likely quite widely, but 40-60 mm may accumulate in a number of places, especially, but not exclusively, over higher ground. Upland areas of southwest England and south and southwest Wales may see 80 mm of rain in a few locations. Given this amount of rainfall, the current saturated conditions, and the potential for fallen leaves to block drains etc, further impacts are likely.

 Low likelihood of medium impacts
